U.S. Patent and Trademark Office PTOL-326 (Rev. 08-06) Applicant's communication submitted on August 18, 2006, has been carefully considered by the Examiner. The arguments advanced therein are persuasive and the rejection made of record in the previous Office action is hereby withdrawn. The Examiner agrees that Saini et al does not disclose optical elements attached to the substrate by adhesive. In view of further search, however, and the consequent discovery of a relevant prior art document, a new rejection is set forth below. This action is not made final.

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claims 1, 3, 15-23, 32, and 33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over newly cited U.S. Patent 6,045,756 to Carr et al in view of U.S. Patent 5,650,123 to Saini et al. Carr et al shows and describes, in Figure 1, an optical interconnection circuit comprising a substrate (platform) 12, a light emitting element 20 fixed on the substrate 12, light receiving elements 26, 28 fixed on the substrate 12, and optical waveguides 22, 24 formed on the substrate to connect the elements. Although the word "adhesive" is not used in the Carr et al reference, the reference indicates that the light emitting and receiving elements are "affixed to the upper surface 18 of the platform 12" (column 3, line 51). To the ordinarily skilled artisan, the word "affixed" would connote a secure and permanent attachment, such as by an adhesive. Therefore, the assumption that the Carr et al light emitting and receiving elements are adhesively fixed to the substrate (platform) 12 would have been obvious to the person of ordinary skill. The optical waveguide (22 or 24) of Carr et al transmits light from the light emitting element 20 to a light receiving element, but does not cover a part of each element. Saini et al, however, shows (in a very similar type of optical interconnection circuit) a waveguide which covers both a part of the light emitting element and a part of the light receiving element (see Figure 1B of Saini et al). Since the geometry of the Saini et al waveguide (with angled in-coupling and out-coupling surfaces) provides more efficient coupling, it would have been obvious to adopt the Saini et al waveguide structure in the interconnection circuit of Carr et al, thus having the angled waveguide end surfaces partially cover the light emitting element and the light receiving element. Only ordinary skill in the art would be involved. As stated in the previous Office action, the limitations of applicant's claims 3, 15-21, 32, and 33 are disclosed in the Saini et al reference. In view of the remarkable similarity between the circuits of Saini et al and Carr et al, the incorporation of these features in Carr et al would have been obvious. With respect to applicant's claims 22 and 23, the method set forth therein is so broadly stated that it would have been obvious, since it basically calls for merely assembling the components that have already been demonstrated to be present in the Carr et al. reference.

Claims 4-14 and 24-31 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. Neither Saini et al nor Carr et al disclose or suggest a waveguide light scattering mechanism or a waveguide light reflecting mechanism (claims 4-14); and neither reference discloses or suggests the specific manufacturing steps set forth in claims 24-31.

Applicant's arguments with respect to the presently pending claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

All of the prior art documents submitted with the Information Disclosure Statement filed on September 8, 2006, have been considered and made of record in the application. Note the attached initialed copy of form PTO-1449.
